

Together We Can Make a Difference

The Southington Education Foundation (SEF) feels compelled to join in the conversation about social justice. The Foundation believes that social justice aligns with our organization's values: equity, innovation, integrity, life-long learning, and school-community partnership. We ask you to reflect on these five values and their definitions below. Together, we can support a quality education for every child by freeing our community of implicit and explicit biases and discrimination.

Southington Education Foundation's Core Values Defined As:

Equity: freedom from bias; justice or fairness of social policy

Innovation: the act or process of introducing new ideas, devices, or methods

Integrity: the quality of being honest and consistent; firm adherence to code of ethics

Life-long learning: the ongoing, voluntary, and self-motivated pursuit of knowledge

School-community partnership: the shared responsibility and reciprocal process with schools and community organizations and others actively supporting children's learning
